“If you know what you want out of life, it’s amazing how opportunities will come to enable you to carry them out.”

John M. Goddard

It is the policy of the Clinton County Regional Educational Service Agency (CCRESA) that no discriminatory practices based on gender, race, religion, color, age, national origin, disability, height, weight, marital status, sexual orientation, political affiliations and beliefs, or any other status covered by federal, state, or local law be allowed in providing instructional opportunities, programs, services, job placement assistance, employment or in policies governing student conduct and attendance. Any person suspecting a discriminatory practice should contact the Special Education Director, 1013 South US-27, St. Johns, MI 48879, or call 989-224-6831.
Introduction

Your role in transition planning is critical. Transition Planning is the process of preparing for completion of the school program and movement into adult life. This is a team effort involving the student, parent/guardian, the school and adult agencies. Successful transition does not just happen. It is important that parents be part of the planning process so that their student can leave school and join the adult community as a confident, participating member. The family’s ongoing support for a teen during these sometimes stressful years is vital. You play a major role on the Transition Team. This family guide will give you information, questions to ask, and suggestions to help you be an active member of the team.

If you have any questions regarding the information within this resource guide or would like to speak to someone within the county school district please contact one of the following people listed below:

What is Transition Planning?

Transition planning is a process that assists all special education students in making a successful transition from secondary education to adult living in the community. Transition services include the following four areas:

1. Post-Secondary Educational Training
2. Employment
3. Adult Living
4. Community Participation

Transition planning can help the student make the move from high school to adult living in a number of ways. These include helping the student identify areas of strengths and their interests; taking their preferences into consideration in planning; helping the student identify what accommodations the student will need to be successful in the post-secondary setting; offering community based experiences including vocational placements; and promoting self-determination skills including self-advocacy.

Transition Planning and Post-Secondary Education

A key change between the high school and the post-secondary educational setting is in the role of the student. In high school, students are often seen primarily as receivers of instruction. It is often understood that it is the school’s responsibility to make sure that the students are learning, and that they have what they need to learn. In college, as adults, students are “consumers” and are expected to take much more responsibility for their success in learning. This means staying organized, asking for what they need, and making sure they do what is needed in order to be successful.

Self-advocacy, the ability to ask for what you want or need and to pursue your rights, is very important for any student; but it is even more important students who have challenges such as learning disabilities, medical conditions, or other disabilities that can interfere with success in the post-secondary setting. In order to develop self-advocacy skills, students must first clarify for themselves what their needs and wants are. Then they must develop confidence and skill in asserting themselves to ask for what they need and want. Transition planning tries to help develop these advocacy skills for students before they leave high school. It also helps students make plans for their post-secondary education experience including aligning their career choice with their interests and aptitudes.

Transition Planning and Employment

This area includes activities leading to employment. This begins with looking at careers, assessment of interests and abilities relating to careers, and making an appropriate career choice. This is followed by learning job skills and good work habits through selected activities including community work experiences. These skills may also be learned through student effort,
Transition Planning and Adult Living
This area includes the skills people use each day to care for themselves and other family members. These skills are important for successful independent living and include such activities as dressing, grooming, household chores, shopping, managing finances, etc. Residential options in this area may range from living alone to group living. These skills may be developed by the student through school course work and/or family activities. The need for a guardian can also be considered at this point for individuals lacking some or all of the skills for independent living.

Transition Planning and Community Participation
This area looks at opportunities for adults to participate in their community as well as the social skills needed to work and enjoy leisure time. Areas addressed include being responsible, using good people skills, achieving independence, problem solving skills and resolving conflicts. It also encourages finding ways to volunteer, join organizations or groups, and to participate in social activities. These skills may be developed through student effort, family support, course work, and/or counseling.

GETTING READY FOR TRANSITION PLANNING

The most important part of “getting ready” for transition is the communication between the student and parent, regarding hope and dreams for the students future. The student and parent prepare for planning by identifying what results they want or expect to achieve.

By sharing thoughts on these topics and others, parents and students prepare to communicate them to teachers and agencies in the Transition and IEP meetings. In these meetings you will learn to organize thoughts and questions you may have about what you want to do in the future. When you have questions or concerns remember the transition team is here to support you.

In order to develop transition plans that are appropriate to the student’s needs, it is important to gather information about the student’s interests, abilities, and experiences. The student, parents/guardians, and teachers may each complete a questionnaire. These questionnaires may be shared during or prior to the transition meeting.
TRANSITION TIMELINES

4 TO 5 YEARS BEFORE LEAVING THE SCHOOL DISTRICT
- Identify learning styles and accommodations needed to be a successful learner and worker.
- Identify career interests, skills and additional education/ training needed.
- Explore options for college, or other forms of post-secondary education.
- Identify options for future living arrangements.
- Student able to explain his/her disability and accommodations needed.
- Learn and practice decision-making skills.
- Begin to manage money.
- Have an identification card and know personal information.
- Learn and practice personal health care.

2 TO 3 YEARS BEFORE LEAVING THE SCHOOL DISTRICT
- Identify community service providers that offer support programs.
- Invite community service providers, peers, and others to Transition/IEP meeting.
- Match career interests and skills with vocational course, academic classes, and community work experience.
- Gather information on post-secondary programs and the support services offered.
- Explore deferred diploma options.
- Become informed about personal health services.
- Determine the need for financial support.
- Learn and practice communication skills and social skills for different settings (employment, school, and recreation).
- Explore guardianship.
- Begin a resume and update as needed.
- Practice independent living skills (budgeting, cooking, and laundry)
- Begin building your job performance skills.
- Broaden your experiences with community activities and expand your friendships.

1 YEAR BEFORE LEAVING THE SCHOOL DISTRICT
- Apply for financial support programs.
- Identify post-secondary program you plan to attend and arrange for accommodations if needed.
- Practice effective communication by developing interviewing skills, asking for help, and identifying accommodations at college and work.
- Specify desired job and obtain employment with supports as needed.
- Take responsibility for arriving in time to work, appointments, filling and taking prescriptions, etc.)
- Register to vote and for selective service (if male) at age 18.
- Bring documentation of your disability with you to apply for community services if needed.
WHAT DOES THE FAMILY NEED TO DO TO BE READY?

The following are checklist of transition activities that you may wish to consider when preparing for transition. Use these checklists to ask yourself whether these issues should be addressed at Transition/IEP meetings. The checklist can also help identify who should be part of the Transition/IEP team and whose responsibility it is for carrying out specific activities.

Student Check Sheet

___Become familiar with how your school handles transition planning.

___Complete the student questionnaire. Use this to help you be aware of the areas covered in a transition plan.

___Attend all IEP and Transition Meetings and be an active participant.

___Invite anyone to the IEP Meeting that you feel will help you provide needed information for the group.

___Identify personal needs and goals related to each of the four domains. Bring a written list to share at the meeting.

___Express your views and feelings during the IEP and Transition meetings! Be sure to share your dreams and interests with the group. Provide any information you feel is necessary.

___Be aware of your rights! You have the right to see your educational records, to question decisions made without your input, have proper evaluations, and ask for positive changes in school transition curriculum.

___Ask questions about things that are unclear or not understood. Ask the members of the team to discuss your options with you.

___Understand your learning differences and advocate for appropriate accommodations to be written into your IEP.

___Make a list of your social and business contacts for possible employment opportunities.

___Prepare for your future. Practice skills in communication, advocacy, self-care, household management, consumer spending, and decision making.

___Be aware of your Transition plan and ask for additions or changes as you feel they are necessary.
Parent Check Sheet

___ Start Planning Early

___ Encourage your student to be as independent as possible.

___ Review transition material sent by the school, gather and look over all school records.

___ Complete and use the Transition Planning Inventory as a basis for discussion regarding your student’s dreams, interests, plans, and career goals.

___ Listen carefully to your student’s interests and future goals.

___ Prepare your student to share his/her dreams, interests, plans, and needs as a part of the transition-planning meeting (a written list may be helpful.)

___ Talk to other families with similar situations to gather helpful information. Join advocacy groups- share experiences; ask for help of you need it.

___ Look for information about the rights of people with disabilities and teach your child about his/her rights.

___ Gather information that you and your student think is important to share. You may have information of which others on the planning team are unaware; such as medical information, former testing, school records, and service records of outside agencies.

___ Attend all meetings and bring any questions that you or your student may have to the meeting. It may be helpful to make a list. Consider asking a friend/advocate to come to the meeting with you. Share with that person a copy of the list of questions so that person can help make sure they are answered.

___ Ask the education and adult service providers to discuss the student’s options.

___ At the meeting, ask questions to clarify things that are unclear.

GETTING READY FOR COLLEGE AND WHAT TO EXPECT WHEN YOU GET THERE
http://www.vesid.nysed.gov/specialed/transition/sah1.html
This website provides a “Student Advocacy Handbook for High School Juniors and Seniors Transitioning to College” It was developed by The Northern New York Post Secondary Transition Team and permission is given to make and distribute copies for educational use without expense to the student. It is a comprehensive manual that includes flow charts, timelines, and strategies, as well as information on students’ rights. Some of the headings include: Looking at Colleges, Campus Support Services, Anticipating Using Accommodations, What Makes a Successful Student, Major Skills Needed by All Students, Common Difficulties Faced, Help Yourself be Successful in College, Information Regarding Education Law, Skill Evaluation Form, and Academic Accommodations Checklist

TRANSITION TO POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION
http://www.ed.gov/about/offices/list/ocr/transition.html
This guide explains the rights and responsibilities of students with disabilities who are preparing to attend postsecondary schools. This guide also explains the obligations of a postsecondary school to provide academic adjustments, including auxiliary aids and services, to ensure that the school does not discriminate.

DISABILITY LAWS RELATED TO POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION
http://www.greatschools.net/cgi-bin/showarticle/2030
This link is to an article called, “Section 504 – Federal Civil Rights Law” Although it is written for parents of school-aged students, it does a succinct job of summarizing the law. The same law applies to post-secondary situations.

FINANCIAL AID
Paying for College in Michigan is an excellent resource for college planning and student financial aid. Produced by the Michigan Department of Treasury, Student Financial Services Bureau, this publication will provide you with specific information about the state and federal financial aid programs that are available and how to apply for the funds.

www.michigan.gov/studentaid - Click on Prospective Students, then Types of Financial Aid. This site provides information on scholarships, grants and other ways students can pay for college.
www.pin.ed.gov  Students and their parents must obtain a Personal Identification Number (PIN) in order to submit the Free Application for Student Financial Aid (FAFSA) online.

www.fafsa.ed.gov  Online address for submitting the FAFSA- You must complete the FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid), if you are going to apply for scholarships, financial aid, or other sources of financial aid. Forms are available from your High School Counselor or you may apply online. Be prepared to have tax information available to complete the form.

http://studentaid.ed.gov/PORTALSWebApp/students/english/funding.jsp  This website has a wealth of information on applying for financial aids and other frequently asked questions related to financial aid. It also includes the new: Financial Aid Estimator Tool - FAFSA4caster. The FAFSA4caster provides students with an early estimate of their eligibility for federal student financial assistance. Students considering furthering their education beyond high school can use this FREE tool to: Calculate their eligibility for federal financial aid including grants and reduce the time it will take to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). To access FAFSA4caster, visit www.fafsa4caster.ed.gov.

The website contains the following admissions information: Baker College has a “right-to-try” admission policy.

1. All students who have earned a high school diploma or its equivalent, such as a General Educational Development certificate (GED) are accepted.
2. Students who have not earned a high school diploma or General Educational Development (GED) certificate may be admitted on the basis of test results.
3. Baker College admits students without regard to race, religion, sex, national origin, or disability.
4. As a “right-to-try,” institution, Baker College does not require either the ACT or SAT as a condition of admission. However, if a student chooses to take either or both tests we encourage him/her to request that the test results be sent to the Baker College campus of his/her choice.

Central Michigan University –
http://www.cmich.edu/x340.xml
The website lists the following admissions information: A solid academic background will help prepare you for success at the college level. To be ready for this challenge, we stress high academic achievement in several rigorous subjects. Central Michigan University and the President’s Council of State Colleges and Universities strongly recommend the following high school background: 4 years of: English, mathematics, biological and physical sciences, history and social sciences. In addition, high school students are strongly encouraged to complete two years of foreign language and two years of electives in fine arts and have one year of hands-on computer experience. Student Disability Services – 989-774-3018

Alma College –
http://www.alma.edu/about
The website lists the following information regarding admission requirements: There are several factors Alma College considers when reviewing applications, including high school GPA, ACT/SAT scores, high school courses and your high school guidance counselor's recommendation. Generally, students who have a 3.0 GPA and 22 on the ACT are accepted, but we review all applications on an individual basis.

America’s Social Security system is comprised of several different programs administered by the Social Security Administration. These programs include:
- Retirement Benefits
- Disability Benefits
- Survivor’s Benefits
- Supplemental Security Income

As a parent/guardian of a child with a disability, the two frequently encountered programs are disabled adult child benefits and supplemental Security Income (SSI).

A child who is disabled prior to age 22 (disabled adult child) may apply for social Security benefits on the record of a parent who is retired, disabled or deceased.

SSI is a program that pays checks to the elderly (over age 65) and to people with disabilities who don’t have much income. This includes children who are disabled or blind.

SOCIAL SECURITY/ SSI AND WORK

Special rules make it possible for people with disabilities who are receiving Social Security/SSI benefits to work and still receive monthly cash payments and Medicare/Medicaid. Social Security calls these rules “work incentives”. Some ex. of these incentives are:
Plans for achieving self support (PASS)
Trial work period
Continuation of Medicare while working
Exclusion of impairment-related work expenses
Special rules for blind workers
Special treatment of sheltered workshop payment
Special exclusions for disabled adults

Ask a Social Security representative about these work incentives and how monthly social security/SSI checks may be affected by work.

This is a link to an article entitled “Self-Advocacy: A Valuable Skill for Your Teenager with LD.” This article gives great guidance for parents on how to develop a student’s self-advocacy skills. This does not have to be limited to LD as the title suggests. It is good for any student trying to learn these skills.

THE EXIT IEPC

The exit IEPC meeting will not be about the end of school services, but about the beginning of adult life in the community. By the time the final meeting is held, there will be some firm plans in place for the future. The young adult will know where to go for further education, work, or activities. Referrals to specific community agencies, which will provide service to the young adult, should have been completed.

If you are not comfortable that all the elements are in place, individuals with disabilities are eligible to receive special services until age 26; therefore students can complete academic requirements through their local high school and then continue to access further classes or vocational services. When a student chooses to defer their diploma, the student may proceed with regular graduation festivities (graduation party, etc) but their diploma will remain in a safe at their local high school.

At the exit IEPC meeting, the Transition Plan will be reviewed one last time. The names of agencies or community contracts will be provided to the students. This transition plan is not a contract of service, but a guide to help you receive services. It is extremely important to keep documentation of services that have been provided by your local district. Before leaving the school system, the student should obtain high school transcripts, evaluations (school psychological report). Last IEP/MET and therapist reports. It is important that you always keep copies of these records; they may be required for receiving services and accommodations in colleges, training centers, and when working with the community service agencies.

HOW DO I GET STARTED WITH AGENCIES

If your student needs training, education, assistance in finding employment or other services beyond high school in order to accomplish daily living, there are community agencies to assist. However, there is “no automatic transfer” from school services to agency services. Students and/or their advocates must apply for these services in order for agencies to be ready to assist when the high school program is done.

Each agency has its own set of conditions that make a person eligible for their services. The student, family, and the organization work together to gather information needed to determine eligibility. Be prepared to communicate the needs you hope the agency can address, problems as the students sees them, and what support the family can give the student while agency services are provided. Some agencies have income limits for services; others do not. In most cases, this is not a quick process. Some agencies have waiting lists that can delay services. The best time to start is now, while the student is still in school. If an agency is unable to meet your needs, ask them for information and to refer you to other community resources. That, too, is part of their job. Don’t be discouraged; start early and advocate for your son or daughter.
