

Literacy Tip Sheet For Parents

Did You Know.... if a child reads for 20 minutes every day, they are exposed to about 1.8 MILLION words of text every year!

When Do I Start?

You can start reading aloud to your child as early as you like-THE EARLIER THE BETTER!

The language experiences that children have before they start school form many powerful brain connections. These connections are used for thinking, language and understanding. Without activities like talking, singing and reading, the brain doesn't develop this rich networks of connections.

Sharing books with your baby

Even young babies can learn from the experience of reading books with you. For example, you can:

- Name familiar and new things – this can help your baby learn about sounds and words. The more words children hear, the more words they learn.
- Change the tone of your voice as you read – this makes it easier for your baby to pick up on different speech sounds, an important step in learning to make sounds himself.
- Read slowly and spend time on each page after you read the words – this lets your baby focus.
- Turn the pages when you read with your baby – this shows him how to use a book.
- Copy the sounds your baby makes and don't be afraid to use baby talk – it helps babies understand how language is put together.
- Sing with your child.
- Talk to your child about the everyday things you're doing and seeing together. For example: "What a nice lunch we're having".

Families that read together, learn together!

Allow children to select books-Collecting books from garage sales is a great way to build a home library!

Build family reading time into routines-Before and after bedtime, before t.v. time, bath time, etc.

Read in different places-try beds, under trees, porch swings, picnic tables, create a classroom to play “school”.

Read stories, words and phrases out loud to build memory and vocabulary.

Ask your child to tell you what he/she just read!

Point to pictures, photos and graphics and ASK QUESTIONS!

Make up stories together and talk about topics presented in books-This builds interest.

Notice the books that are favorites-read them again and again! This builds repetition and language.

Visit your library and check out local bookstores for free summer reading programs!

Make sure your child’s preschool or child care provider reads to the children daily!

Keep this goal in mind: All Children are prepared to succeed in Fourth Grade and beyond by reading proficiently by the end of Third Grade.
